PRISON PLACE OF EVIL ONE

Indian Tradition Accounting for Natural Wonder in the Mountains of Southern California.

Hidden away among the mountains of southern California is a strange and practically unknown natural wonder—a great mass of basalt rock shaped into extraordinary formations which are proving a puzzle to scientists. The Devil's Post Pile, as this curious phenomenon is called, has been set apart as a national monument.

Italian tradition deals with the Devil's Post Pile. It says that long, long ago, when everything was young, there came among the Piutes a very wicked spirit who professed to be far wiser and better than they, and sought to lead them into new ways of thinking and living, to gratify his own evil ends. In this upstart, a coyote in lamb's fleece, the "heap big boss devil" saw a treacherous and formidable rival, so he thrust him into a cavern and drove the posts in behind him to make certain he'd stay. He's still wriggling and sputtering down there, and his mad struggles send the waters up sizzling and steaming.

DANES FOR MADAGASCAR?

The international labor office has been informed that the French government has communicated to the Danish minister of foreign affairs a scheme for settlement on a large scale in Madagascar. A large area of arable and forest land would be placed at the disposal of Danish emigrants; they would be permitted to bring their own teachers and their own ministers of religion. Some well-known members of the medical profession in Denmark have offered to accompany the emigrants and to stay with them for some time.

Public opinion in Denmark is not at present unanimous as to the advantages of the scheme. There is a certain amount of opposition on account of the bad climate and high disease rate of Madagascar.

BURGLAR-PROOF WINDOW

A burglar-proof window, shown in Popular Mechanics Magazine, permits the sash to be opened to any desired height. Protection is insured by a set of iron bars, five inches apart, that are raised or lowered with the window. When the window is down, the bars are telescoped between the wall and woodwork. Mortised and locked, at all times, to a heavy strip of metal fastened at the bottom of the sash, the window can scarcely be forced.

Millions in Money Is Hidden Away and Forgotten

Washington, July 6.—It is startling and true that there are outstanding $25,250,880 worth of matured government securities which have never been presented for redemption and on which long ago interest payments were discontinued.

From time to time some of the missing securities find their way back to the treasury from the long unopened boxes, caches in stockings and vases, or dusty bureau drawers, and are stricken from the books, but they are few.

In the long list of those that have matured and ceased to draw interest, are:

Loan of 1908-18, $326,040.

The Victory Loan of 1922-23 $14,609,400.

DOG RESCUED PLAYMATE

A German police dog, while running along the edge of thin ice covering part of the Connecticut river near Hartford, fell into the water. Although several persons saw the dog's plight, they were unable to help, and it seemed as though the animal would be drowned, but another large dog, a playmate of the police dog, went to the rescue. It ran down the river to the nearest clear water, and when the police dog came to the surface the rescuer rushed to the edge of the ice and pulled it out. The comrades celebrated by running up and down the river bank, barking joyously.

ARE NOT RACE OF DWARFS

African Pygmies Said to Have an Average Stature of Five Feet and More.

There are certain popular errors concerning the race of under-sized men and women known as pygmies. Usually travelers have measured the most diminutive specimens, and thus an exaggerated idea of their smallness has been produced. The average stature of the pygmies that have been measured is about four feet eight inches, but the best authorities in anthropology say that the real average limit of stature is five feet. Some are taller than that. The pygmies have been found in eight or ten different places in Central Africa, but wherever found they possess certain striking resemblances. The plant furnishing the covering for their huts is the same in the widely separated regions visited by Stanley and others, and the shape of the huts, a rough hemisphere, is the same.

All the pygmies are alike characterized by neglect of agriculture, by the use of poisoned arrows, and by the absence of any centralized tribal organization.

JOKE'S SLOW PENETRATION

"With us," explained the Scot, "wad means would."

I did not fail to observe that here was an opportunity to animadvert keenly, not to say wittily, upon the great and growing power of wealth in my own country.

"With us," I rejoined, "wad means might."

We parted at this, but I set detectives to shadow him, and they reported to me that three and a half hours later he smiled faintly.—Boston Transcript.

Richmond Did Herself Proud Celebrating Natal Day

Richmond's observance of Independence Day was the climax of all like celebrations of the city in the way of parades, to say nothing of the excellent program and its attractive features that added to the day's entertainment.

The parade was a surprise. It was novel, interesting and full of pep and national colors.

Visitors from all over Central California were in attendance and several fraternal organizations from surrounding cities, Oakland, Pittsburg, Martinez and other places, assisted in making the parade and the day one of the biggest and best ever experienced in Richmond.

The management of the celebration did themselves proud in staging a most successful celebration and deserve praise for their efforts.

Stockton Staged Big Fourth of July Celebration

Stockton, July 6.—The Fourth of July parade in this city was the largest in the history of Stockton. It is estimated that 50,000 visitors were here to view the parade, the interesting feature of which was 2000 K. K. K.'s, marching four abreast and extending in line several blocks. An open gap was left in the line, and when the parade appeared opposite the Klan's headquarters, the latter fell in, as per arrangement.

It is said 2000 armed secret officers were in the side lines, to quiet any disturbance or disorder by rowdies.

Albany Business Center Congested With Traffic

(Albany Argus)

The traffic on Albany's main thoroughfare, which is the state highway as well as San Pablo avenue, is becoming almost terrific in rush hours and of Sundays. With the street cars, stages and private vehicles going and coming, it is almost impossible to get across the avenue at Main, Sundays the jam being so dense that even a traffic officer has difficulty in handling the situation.

When safety stations are installed the condition, it is hoped, will be improved; at least the stations will offer some protection to the women and children, who have to scurry and dodge, many having close calls of being run down by the speed maniacs, who cut in and out and miss their victims by a hair.

TURK PRESS AGAIN USES HOSTILE TONE

INSIST ON OWN TERMS IN LOUSANNE PARLEY

ALLIES UNDER A FIRE OF WARLIKE THREATS

Aware that Conference Has Lasted Too Long and Assume Uncompromising Attitude.—Army Badly Demoralized.

Constantinople.—The allies are again under the fire of the Turkish press, which has been instructed to adopt a warlike and menacing tone. All are aware that the conference has lasted long enough and the Haktmet I. Milis, Mustapha Kemal's personal newspaper, says: "Our patients has come to an end. If we do not have positive results before the end of the week, Ismet Pasha and the other Turkish delegates must leave Lausanne without further delay."

It is officially announced that the Cabinet council has telegraphed Ismet Pasha to settle nothing unless the allies accept the Turkish point of view regarding the refunding of the pre-war debts and the evacuation of Constantinople.

In spite of threatening language of the newspapers and the apparently uncompromising attitude of the Angora Cabinet, the resumption of hostilities is unlikely for the good reason that the Turkish army is no longer capable of taking the offensive either on the eastern or the western front.

Ten months of inactivity, coupled with the fact that the officers are engaged in party politics, and that the men are unpaid and badly looked after, has had disastrous effects on the Turks. In spite of Kemal Pasha's strict orders that the army should not take part in the elections, many officers have left their units and are taking part in the campaign.

Some of them think that five years of war for the independence of the country has given them the right to decide who should belong to the assembly; others see the possibility of obtaining pleasant and remunerative employment after demobilization.

POLICEMEN IN RUM PLOT GET SENTENCE AND FINES

San Francisco.—Jail sentences and fines were given Police Lieutenant D. H. Brasfield and Patrolmen Mark Williver and William Barion, convicted of conspiracy to violate the Volstead act by smuggling liquor at South San Francisco. Brasfield and Williver were sentenced to serve eighteen months each in Leavenworth penitentiary and pay fines of $1,000 each, and Barion was given a jail sentence of a year and a day and a fine of $500. In passing sentence Judge Van Fleet declared that evidence indicated that Barion was inveigled into the plot by the other two.

A stay of execution of two days was granted by the court to enable John W. Preston, counsel for the defense, to appeal the case. His motion for a new trial on the ground of insufficient evidence was denied.

The trio were arrested with seven civilians at South San Francisco on the night of February 1 by federal officers, who seised four truckloads of liquor and three cases of whisky in Williver's automobile. The policemen declared they had gone to the scene to arrest the civilians. Following their conviction in the federal court all were dismissed by the police commission.

FOREIGN WET SHIPS ARE SAFE FROM U. S. SEIZURE

Washington.—That the United States has power to seize foreign ships bringing contraband liquor into port, but will make no effort to exercise that authority, is the decision reached after conferences between Secretary of State Hughes, Under-Secretary of the Treasury Gilbert and other officials.

Seizure of the liquor stores accomplishes the purpose of the law and this government is not disposed to complicate the situation further by attempting to seize the vessels.

London.—Surrender of the shippers in the battle to break the American ship liquor rule is seen in the report that the White Star liner Homeric will carry only enough liquor to reach the three-mile limit and will return dry.

SAN FRANCISCO PAPERS IN BIG DAMAGE SUIT

San Francisco.—The San Francisco Examiner and the San Francisco Chronicle, including their publishers, William Randolph Hearst and M. H. de Young, are made defendants in a suit filed in the United States District court by the San Francisco Journal for $200,000 damages. The complaint alleges that the two newspapers engaged in a conspiracy to prevent The Journal from circulating throughout the state of California and elsewhere throughout the United States.

Those named as defendants in the action are Chronicle Publishing company, Examiner Printing company, M. H. de Young, William Randolph Hearst.

POPE PIUS SENDS MESSAGE ASKING RUHR EVACUATION

"Only after evacuation of the Ruhr can pacification be reached," said the papal communication. The message recalls a similar international appeal issued from the Vatican at the time of the historic Genoa conference.

The Pontiff pointed out that the failures to reach a settlement by conference had complicated the situation "justifying fears for the future."

HARD LUCK FOLLOWS THIS LITTLE FAMILY

Heart Disease Kills Three of Them and Father Dies in an Accident.

Sioux Falls, S. D.—A peculiar and unusual series of tragedies has followed the family of Mrs. Sarah Flannery of Montrose, a village near Sioux Falls. Recently Gertrude, her twelve-year-old daughter, dropped dead as she was preparing to retire for the night. The girl had been the victim of heart trouble during the last few years.

Some years ago the father of Mrs. Flannery was found dead in bed as the result of a sudden attack of heart failure, and some time later her mother died in the same manner.

Her husband, Peter, was instantly killed several years ago, being caught in the engine in the Flannery implement house in Montrose. Mrs. Flannery herself must be free from heart trouble, or the numerous shocks she has experienced by the sudden deaths of members of her family would have killed her long since.

Since her husband's death she has gone bravely ahead with life's work, and has reared her young family to the point where four of her children are nearly through school and ready to assist in supporting the family.

Todorff "fell" for the plan and gave the men $35,000—in counterfeit bills, which he obtained from a United States marshal after telling him of the game.

Gorgis and Dochoff were shadowed by government men and arrested for conspiracy to commit larceny. The two men were tried, convicted and given long prison sentences.

Question of Taste.

While visiting a friend in a small town she asked me to go with her to a meeting of the missionary society of her church. They were collecting clothing to be sent to ministers and their families in the Northwest. Before sending the things, they cleaned, pressed, mended and thoroughly renovated the clothing. Being a milliner, I offered to fix up the hats. I had finished all except one. Turning to one of the women, I said: "Did you ever see anything as awful as this hat? No minister's wife will thank anyone for sending her this."

"No, I don't believe they will," she replied. "That is my hat, and I intend to wear it myself."—Chicago Tribune.

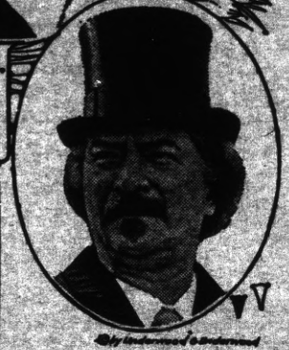
Paderewski Comes Back

Polish Pianist, War Worn and 62, Has $500,000 Season



Oh, my friend, my heart is full of happiness. What a man you are! You are more than a musician. You are a poet and there is poetry in your fingers.—Clemenceau.

IGNACE JAN PADEREWSKI and his wife sailed from New York for Europe the other day. No; he was not going back into politics. He was going to take a rest. May he "loaf and enjoy his soul" to his heart's content. He deserves it.

For Paderewski has staged during the past winter a most remarkable "comeback". His American tour has been the most wonderful triumph ever won by a musician. He has surpassed even his triumphs of the Nineties.

And Paderewski is sixty-two!

When the tour was in preparation insurance was sought. Not an insurance company in all the world would listen to him. Even Lloyd's, which will take a chance on almost anything, refused him.

It is to laugh. Paderewski at sixty-two gave 73 recitals. He traveled 18,000 miles in a private car. He dislikes to be "entertained," but there were social invitations pressed upon him which he could not ignore. His principal trouble was to find halls big enough to hold his audiences. His biggest audience was one of 7,000 in San Francisco—receipts, $24,500. In three recitals in New York the receipts were $47,000; for two in Chicago, $21,000; for two in Los Angeles, $18,494; for three in Boston, $24,500 and for one in Cleveland, $15,941.

The gross receipts of the tour which no company would insure were $500,000!

When Clemenceau was in New York at the Gibson home, Paderewski appeared and begged to see the great Frenchman. It was late and the "Tiger" was in bed.

Just the same, the Tiger was delighted. "Of course. At once. Why, I would see this great man in bed."

They met in the center of Clemenceau's chamber, embraced and put lip to cheek, after the continental custom.

After their chat the Frenchman said: "Before I go home I want to hear you play. When shall I have that pleasure?"

"Master," said the pianist, "I will play for you now."

Clemenceau was delighted. Leading the Pole by the hand he almost danced downstairs to the music room, shouting like a boy and summoning the household to "come and hear; come and hear."

Paderewski seated himself, looked at the Tiger a moment as if for inspiration, then leaned back, closed his eyes and played—four times. And through it all Clemenceau sat erect in his chair, his features a kaleidoscope of the passion and pathos of the music.

As Paderewski finished Clemenceau caressed him again.

"Oh, my friend; my heart is full of happiness. What a man you are! You are more than a musician. You are a poet and there is poetry in your fingers."

Well, that is the way—figuratively speaking—that Paderewski and the American public met.

Nevertheless, for a long time there was every indication that the Polish pianist was lost to the world of music. He quit in 1915 to devote himself, body, soul and fortune, to his native land. He came to America as plenipotentiary from the National Polish committee and labored like a giant. He raised a large sum through many benefit concerts. He delivered many addresses to recruit Poles in the United States. He spent his private fortune in organizing the struggle for Polish freedom.

In January of 1919, working with General Pilsudski, the military dictator of Poland, Paderewski became prime minister of the reconstituted Polish state. He was slightly wounded at Warsaw by a would-be assassin. As premier, Paderewski did as well as anyone could in those distracted days. He kept things going. He represented his country ably at the peace conference.

Paderewski returned to this country, war-worn and with his fortune gone. And he said at that time:

"I shall never play in public again. That is a closed chapter. I shall compose music from time to time, but I shall never play again." And thereupon he went into retirement in California.

But Old Mother Nature is a jolly good nurse—the very best there is. She offers rest and quiet and peace to the weary. She has cures of her own for the sick at heart. And the Pole was a patient worth her best efforts. He is a big man physically. Any man who can play at a public performance for three hours, with only a brief intermission, is a strong man. And he is a strong man mentally.

Anyway, Old Mother Nature had her way with this strong man. Those who know him well say that in the depths of his own being he found strength and philosophy to regain his poise; that his present physical and artistic well-being is but the reflection of the man within; that Paderewski is master of himself as well as of his instrument.

Yet Paderewski is temperamental, like most artists. He is a man of intense emotions. At the time the late president of Poland was assassinated the news was kept from him until after he had finished his recital. When he was told he collapsed in a chair—rage, grief and anxiety overcoming him.

The thinking reader will not have to be told that there are other features in the situation which make the "comeback" of Paderewski remarkable. It was more than a generation ago that Paderewski made his first appearance in New York. And times have changed since then—in the musical world no less than in the world of affairs.

Paderewski was born in Podolia, Russian Poland, in 1860. He was a youthful prodigy and played the piano in public at twelve. In 1887 he appeared with marked success in Vienna; tours in Germany, France and England followed. In 1891 he made the first of several successful visits to the United States.

The young Polish pianist created a furore, indeed. The sensation which followed was epochal in the annals of music. He was a fascinating figure, indeed—tall and slender, with Sir Galahad face and hair that suggested to the cartoonists a huge chrysanthemum of gleaming gold. It may have been his personal magnetism, his poetic beauty, graceful poses and extraordinary coloring; anyway, his audiences were his before he struck a note.

And when his "fingers of steel with tips of velvet" drew from the instrument melody and poetry, harmony and majesty, he threw his hearers out of normal balance. His audiences rose from their seats in wild disorder to storm the platform. Something had gone across the footlights that could not be resisted. So it was all over the country. Crowds gathered wherever he appeared, eager to carry him in triumph. In those days, though there were many pianists of note, there was one Best Pianist and everyone knew his name.

But now, how things are changed! Now those who are best qualified to judge are reluctant to attribute primacy to any artist, however great. They see in each great artist his individual excellencies that make him great. They see no basis of comparison between, for instance, a Paderewski and a Hofmann or between a Hofmann and a Gabrilowitch. All, they say, are great, but none is the greatest.

Moreover, Paderewski's triumph was a generation ago. The flapper who now goes to recitals knows not the handsome young Pole of the Nineties. No doubt, her mother is loyal to the memories of those fascinating days. But the musical youth of today have a score of superpianists to follow and adore.

And yet, in spite of all this, Paderewski came back—and in more ways than one. His triumphant reception by his friends on his first appearance was a musical affair. Yet the musical interest was of minor importance. The critics tried—and not very successfully—to say that Paderewski had not entirely recovered his early form but that he played better than ever. It was evident that they appreciated the presence of a force that lay beyond and perhaps above art. It was there.

Paderewski is beyond question one of the foremost artists of the times. He is a patriot who spent his fortune and abandoned his art in organizing the struggle for Polish freedom. He is an orator of distinction. He is a statesman who has been premier of a big nation. And he is a man strong enough to come back at sixty-two.

The thousands of Americans who crowded Paderewski's recitals from coast to coast and gave back to him in a few short months the fortune spent for his native land undoubtedly saw in him more than the musician. The new artistic laurels they thrust upon the artist were in no small part their recognition of him as a man.

Bachelor or Cowherd

Our word bachelor is a corruption of an old medieval word for "cowherd." In those days almost the whole population existed by agriculture, and the "bachelor" or "cowherd" was the lowest office, held by the youngest and poorest. Similarly in those days a "knight bachelor" was a knight of an inferior rank, as nowadays a bachelor of arts is one who has not yet been admitted to the degree of master of arts. The word's present meaning of an unmarried man is more than 500 years old, and signifies a man who has not yet entered upon the full duties of manhood's estate. Our ancestors did not dream that middle-aged and well-to-do men should ever remain unwed!

"Better End" Is Correct.

When one speaks of pursuing a course of action to the "bitter end" he means that he will follow it to the last and direst extremity—death itself. While the phrase in this sense has the sanction of good usage, it is probable that originally the expression was to the "better end." This latter form is used properly to designate a crisis, or the moment of an extremity. When, for instance, a vessel has paid out all her cable, it has run out to the "better end"—the end which is secured within the vessel and little used. Robinson Crusoe, in describing a terrible storm, says: "We rode with two anchors ahead and the cables veered out to the better end."

CURRENCY IN DIRE DISORDER

Anecdote of Vice President Marshall Vivid Illustration of Present Conditions in Europe.

Former Vice President Marshall said on his return from Europe:

"I heard a good exchange story in Genoa. At the time of the Genoa conference the big guns of the various governments lunched together in Genoa's famous mountain-top restaurant one day. Each big gun paid for himself. The bill was 100 lire apiece.

"Well, Washburn Child, the American, paid with a $5 note. They gave him change. Lloyd George paid with a sovereign and a lot of coppers. This was accepted after a bit of a wrangle. Barthou, the Frenchman, paid with a 50-franc note and a pint of chicken feed. The Austrian, Schober, paid with an order on his commissariat for three cubic yards of paper crowns, and Tchitcherin, the Russian, calmly handed the waiter a small packet with the words: 'There's a ruble plate, or die, inside, my man. Take it and print off as many as you like.'"

Zonite!

The Greatest of all Antiseptics

What It Is

ZONITE is a concentrated, stabilized and perfected form of the Carrel-Dakin Solution. The Carrel-Dakin Solution is an antiseptic developed during the World War by two eminent scientists. War hospital records show that it reduced amputations and deaths from infection over seventy per cent and saved the lives of hundreds of thousands of desperately wounded men. It has been adopted and is in daily use by the medical profession and in hospitals throughout the civilized world.

By standard laboratory tests Zonite has more than three times the germicidal strength of pure carbolic acid. It has about seventy-five times the germicidal strength of peroxide of hydrogen and forty times the germicidal strength of any solution of carbolic acid, iodine, bichloride of mercury, etc., that can be applied with safety to the human body.

In addition to its high germicidal efficiency, Zonite is non-poisonous, non-irritating, non-caustic and healing. It can be used freely and frequently on the delicate membranes and tissues of the human body without harm.

What It Does

For Preventing Contagious Diseases

Until the discovery of this form of antiseptic, it was impossible to introduce freely into the mouth and nose any antiseptic solution at sufficient strength to destroy disease germs effectively. It is in the prevention of germ diseases, therefore, that Zonite finds one of its greatest fields of usefulness. During epidemics of colds, grippe, scarlet fever, diphtheria, measles, whooping cough, sore throat and other respiratory diseases, when every sneeze and draft scatters millions of germs, Zonite should be used frequently as a throat spray and nasal douche.

For Cuts and Wounds

Zonite should be promptly applied to a fresh cut or wound to destroy the germs which cause blood poisoning and other similar forms of infection. In addition to acting as a disinfectant, it will shorten the process of healing and greatly reduce the usual pain and inflammation.

As a Mouth Wash

A solution of one teaspoonful Zonite added to one-quarter glass of water used night and morning as a mouth wash will destroy breath odors and act as an excellent preventive against pyorrhea. Dental authorities have stated that the daily use of Zonite in this manner, together with regular dental inspection, reduces the likelihood of contracting this disease to a minimum.

Sore Throat

Nearly all the ailments of the throat are due to bacterial infection. Prompt relief, therefore, can not be obtained without the use of an effective germicide. One part Zonite to five parts water as a gargle or throat spray usually clears up and controls throat infections. In severe cases, especially when ulcerations are present, the throat should be swabbed with pure Zonite and your physician called. Begin treatment promptly when symptoms first appear.

For Burns, Scalds and Blisters

Zonite is especially valuable in the treatment of burns, scalds and blisters. It prevents infection, aids in removing charred or dead tissue, helps to reduce inflammation, and accelerates healing. It also lessens scars and disfigurations that are apt to follow wounds of this character.

For Personal Hygiene

Zonite is the ideal antiseptic for personal hygiene. Poisonous caustic compounds, such as bichloride of mercury, phenol and cresol solutions, etc., are tremendously harmful when used regularly for douche medication. Any physician will testify this statement. Write for the Zonite booklet on personal hygiene for women.

For Dandruff

Dandruff (seborrhea sicca) and many other scalp irritations are due to bacterial infection. Zonite has proved remarkably effective in removing these annoying conditions. It kills the micro-organisms, dissolves and removes the scaling incrustations and produces a stimulating and tonic effect on the scalp tissues and hair follicles.

For Catarrh

Zonite affords a most efficient local treatment for this condition. Used as a nasal spray it quickly loosens the hardened incrustations of mucous matter, clears up the nasal passages and soothes and heals congested membranes. Note—Atomizer fittings in which Zonite is used must be of hard rubber.

Rash, Skin Eruptions

There are numerous kinds of skin eruptions classed as eczema. Many of these yield readily to the application of Zonite. A few trials will demonstrate whether or not the antiseptic will be of service. Chronic skin troubles and skin troubles induced by system disorders should receive the attention of a physician.

For Old Sores

Zonite is remarkably effective in healing old sores and slow healing wounds. Used in a strong solution it will aid in dissolving dead tissue and removing proud flesh. By killing the germs, it stops the discharge of pus, rendering the sore clean and healthy. A milder solution used daily will aid in rapid healing.

Poison Ivy

In cases of poison ivy and similar plant poisoning, Zonite is perhaps the most effective remedial agent known to materia medica. It acts with extraordinary promptness in cleaning up the inflammation and restoring the skin to a normal condition.

For Insect Bites

As a relief from bee stings, mosquito bites, chiggers and many other insect bites, Zonite is particularly effective. If promptly used, the antiseptic will lessen the pain and reduce swelling and irritation.

Bad Breath (halitosis)

Breath odors are usually caused by a bacteriological condition of the mouth. Zonite is the one form of antiseptic with real germicidal power that can be used freely in the mouth. Its effect is far more thorough and far more lasting than pleasant tasting mouth washes heretofore used for this purpose.

For Body Odors

Objectionable body odors are caused by a germ (bacterium foetidum) which infects the sweat glands of the arm-pits, feet, etc. A scientific body deodorant must not only dispel the odor but destroy the germs which cause it. Deodorants which merely replace one odor with another or clog the pores are harmful and inefficient. Zonite kills the germs, destroys body odors promptly and effectively and leaves no odor of its own.

Rids the Home of Deadly Poisons

It is no longer necessary to keep the skull and crossbones type of antiseptic in the home. Zonite, while highly germicidal, can cause no fatal accident. It also supplants pleasant tasting mouth washes and gargles, heretofore in general use, that according to government reports, have no detectable germicidal power.

Zonite is a clear, colorless liquid that does not stain and leaves no odor. It is the last word of science on the subject of antiseptics. Ask your druggist for the Zonite "Handbook on Antiseptics," which describes fully the protection which the antiseptic brings to the home.

"A dinner, A dollar"

Perhaps the "Ten o'clock Scholar" DID know something about gas. For the average family finds the cost of cooking its dinner with gas to be about a dollar a month or 3⅓ cents for gas to cook the meat, vegetables and dessert of the big meal of the day, Sundays included.

The gas penny certainly is a big penny.

Gas is purchased like any other commodity. The rate is based on 1,000 cubic feet—and each cubic foot supplies a definite quantity of heat-energy for your use and comfort.

You order the gas by opening the valve. It is delivered to you instantly and registered in cubic feet on your gas meter.

If you would like to know how many cubic feet of gas you are using—and how much you are paying for it—ask at any P G and E office for free folder, "How to Read Your Gas Meter." Ask also to see the schedule of gas rates now applying in your community.

Road Adjustment Big Item

Thirty-seven million dollars will be expended for maintenance and reconstruction of state and county roads in California during the fiscal years 1923 1924 and 1924-1925.

During this period the state highway commission will reconstruct 364.7 miles of state highway, at a cost of $9,879,120. The state will maintain 3926 miles of improved highways at a cost of $1,372,249 in 1923-24 and 4148 miles at a cost of $1,500,515 in 1924-25.

California has done some very good work in adding a two-foot shoulder on each side of the present concrete roads which are crystallizing under traffic impact and filling in the space between with an asphaltic concrete wearing surface about three inches thick.

Thus, is the old road base utilized at a great saving to the taxpayers and an additional four feet in width is secured to handle increased traffic

Western road construction has proved conclusively that the shock absorbing qualities of asphaltic concrete withstand traffic impact most successfully.

Record Lumber Shipments

One day recently, 5,560,000 feet of lumber was shipped by ocean steamer from the port of Tacoma. In three days a total of 8,650,000, a new record in lumber shipments.

The lumber was not consigned to American ports. Over 2,000,000 feet of it was loaded for San Pedro, another 1,000,000 feet for the Orient, and heavy consignments to Australia and other points. While this enormous shipment was being made to foreign ports, the American market was being supplied from the output of 150 sawmills and woodworking factories in the district, with record shipments over four transcontinental lines.

The unusual activity of the lumber market reveals that not only America but practically the entire world has again taken up the task of building where it was left off eight years ago during the world war.

Lumber is the cheapest and most universal home building material today.

Shy on "Pep," Workers Need the "Sharp Stick"

Can anyone tell why all government departments in all countries are slow, wasteful and incompetent? There must be some basic reason for this, as the individuals in these departments cannot be all inferior to the individuals in private firms. Almost invariably a man becomes 50 per cent less active in routine government work. In a government job there is little competition, no payment by results, no piecework, no profit-sharing.

A man receives the same remuneration for doing badly as he does for doing well, and there is no fear of discharge. If the department doesn't pay—very well, the treasury has plenty, and there is no danger of losing customers.

A government employe has simply nothing to do with success. His aim is to avoid mistakes. The less he does—the fewer mistakes.

State or federal ownership, or so-called nationalization is not only a destroyer of trade and commerce—it is a coral reef built across the harbor of prosperity.—Herbert N Casson.

Hairs Help Unravel Mysteries

In the consideration of many police cases, such as mysterious murders, there is often present evidence in the shape of hair in the wounds or in the fingers of victims. Heretofore there has been made little use of this for the lack of knowledge concerning it. The importance of this subject thrust itself upon the notice of John A. Ford of the police department of Berkeley, Cal., and he has made a very thorough investigation into the characteristics of hair of human beings and the lower animals. He has hundreds of specimens, many of which have been examined under the microscope and their characteristics noted. Rabbit hair on a hatchet with which a murder has been done was the means of tracing the crime to a man who owned the implement and who had used it to kill a rabbit with shortly before the murder.

Whales on English Farm.

Farm hands digging celery on a farm near Peterborough, England, recently came upon the skeletons of two whales, dating back, it is supposed, 10,000 to 12,000 years. The whales were lying side by side under the peat, and just embedded in the clay. It is conjectured that many thousand years ago these whales, and perhaps others, swam up a creek, when the wash came further inland, and got caught at the top of a spring tide in a place where they were unable to turn. Another theory has been advanced, though it is rather far-fetched: Some years ago a prehistoric boat was dug up in the same field, and the suggestion has been made that the crew of the boat was hunting the whales at that particular period.

Who owns the Santa Fe?

Not a few persons, but many thousands, are stockholders in this great railway. All have a voice in its management.

The number of stockholders living in states traversed by the Santa Fe is steadily increasing.

Every railroad has two classes of people interested in its financial structure—viz., the stockholders and the bondholders. In the minds of many, both classes are considered as owners. As a matter of fact, only the holders of the stock are owners. The bondholders are loaners of money, the bonds representing a mortgage on the property to insure payment of money loaned.

The Stockholders of the Santa Fe are, therefore, the owners of the road. Each share has an equal voice in all meetings of the Company. At the annual meeting vacancies in the Board of Directors are filled and such other business transacted as requires action by the stockholders.

Number of Stockholders—

There were on December 31st last 64,643 stockholders, of which 29,820 were men, 29,235 women, and the balance made up of firms, estates, and institutions, among the latter being—

122 insurance companies;
108 educational institutions;
93 religious organizations;
89 hospitals and charitable bodies.

Average Holding—

The average holding of stock was only 55.4 shares per name, but the holdings run from one share upwards—

14,583 held 5 shares or less;
26,335 held from 6 to 20 shares;
12,938 held from 21 to 50 shares;
6,378 held from 51 to 100 shares;
Only 4,409 held over 100 shares.

Two Classes of Stock—

There are two classes of stock, viz., Preferred and Common, there being outstanding on December 31st last—

1,241,737 shares of Preferred Stock;
2,270,525 shares of Common Stock;
Total—3,512,262 shares of both.

Dividend Payments—

The Preferred Stock is limited to 5% dividends. The balance of the earnings of the Company is available for Common Stock dividends. Dividends on the Preferred Stock have been paid for 28 years and for 23 years these have not been below 5%. Dividends on the Common began in 1901 and have not been below 6% since 1909. Something has been added to surplus each year since the reorganization of the company January 1, 1896.

Local Stockholders—

The number of stockholders in the states traversed by the Santa Fe is steadily increasing. In 1910 there were 1792 in those states, while in 1922 the number had grown to 7831.

The Bondholders—

While our bondholders have no share in the ownership or management of the property their importance is fully recognized. The Santa Fe had outstanding December 31, 1922, in round figures $287,000,000 of bonds. These are owned:

Insurance Companies	$ 78,042,000
Savings Banks	18,707,000
Charitable Institutions	9,781,000
Corporations	51,339,000
Individuals	129,196,000

The total number of bondholders is about 32,000.

Tame Enough in Front.

Pat Hegarty had just purchased a mule, but he did not obtain from the animal all that he required of it.

So he wended his way back to the horse dealer.

"You said this mule was quite tame," he said to the dealer.

"And so he is tame, isn't he?" replied the dealer, in an aggrieved tone.

"Not altogether—only partially so," the disconsolate Hegarty replied. "He is tame in front, I dare say, but he is desperately wild behind!"

Co-Operation in Japan.

At the eighteenth national convention of co-operative societies recently held in Tokyo, 12,000 delegates were on hand representing 2,850,000 "co-operators," belonging to 3,770 local organizations, according to reports of the meeting received by the all-American co-operative commission of Cleveland. Banking is one of the strong features of Japanese co-operative activities.
